China.

TAMU.

From Tamui we learn that the savages on the coast are again getting hostile and that General Iung has gone to Black Rock Bay to punish them, as they have for the second time made an attack and killed many Chinese. The General has returned with only half of his men and he has been much exhausted and is suffering from a severe attack of fever. It is to be believed that the savages will never be on friendly terms with the Chinese.

Ever is a common thing specially among the Chinese, and those that come from the mainland are more exposed.
H. M. S. Swinger left on the 1st September for Keelung and from thence she will proceed to Wenchow and return to Tamui in October. —Amoy Gazette.

FOOCHOW.

(N. U. P. News.)

A Correspondent, writing on the 8th August, says the anti-foreign literati or their mob set fire yesterday evening to the Missionary buildings at Wu-shih-shan. The English Consul and a number of Chinese officials were there during the day, but would not hear anything from them. I am told the mob stoned the Consul and Chinese officials, who consequently retreated, and the mob were left to do as they liked. The premises were burnt to the ground. I dare say from what had passed previously, the Chinese officials were aware of this intended outbreak a few days before, and very likely could have easily prevented it, if a few of the Chinese gunboats lying at the Anchorage had been brought up, which could easily have been done.

SHANGHAI.

A rumour was current on the 5th, based upon good authority, that the young Marquis Tseng-chi, son of the great Tseng-tung, had been appointed ambassador to England, vice Kuo Iu-jen who is recalled. It is not known whether this has been done at the latter's own request, but whether it has or not, it must not be regarded as a sign of reaction, for Kuo is well known for his progressive ideas and regard for foreigners. It is also known that His Excellency Liu is to return to Peking. He is to be succeeded at Berlin by Li Wang-pao, who has been, it is said, appointed Charge d'Affaires.

TIENTSIN.

We learn that the Fel Ho has broken its eastern bank at a point some distance above us, but do not know how extensive an opening has been made, or the amount of damage done. There seems to be much danger of a like calamity at one or two points below us.

The Canal (or Wei River) has also broken over its embankments in two places, both some distance from Tientsin. The plain is almost covered with water. So much rain has fallen that the ground is thoroughly saturated, and there is no more unfilled holes for it to flow into. The crops are beginning to suffer very seriously. It is to be hoped that no more rain will fall for some time.

WANKING.

Miao-shang Ngan, 30th August.
The refreshing coolness we have been enjoying for the last few days has given way to a sudden, but it is to be hoped short-lived, burst of heat. The late showers have caused many of the creeks and pools in the neighbourhood to overflow, and several of the streets are under water. This is particularly the case in Confucius Square, where the lake in front of the great Temple has encroached upon the thoroughfare even up to the temple gates, so that people have to go plashing through water with bare legs, the strong ones carrying their feeble friends upon their shoulders. The scene there just now is very curious and a very pretty one. On one side is the great Fu-tze Miao, with its wide spreading, curled up roofs rising tier above tier, and its really imposing facade; while on the other side of the broad pathway, neatly embanked with massive, smooth stone, lies a large sheet of water, surrounded here and there by ornamental pavilions and kiosks. The other day the entire crowd of idlers were thrown into a state of the greatest excitement by an extraordinary portent, which suddenly appeared in the sky. The scene was really very strange, and may be considered worth describing. The writer was one of a tea-party in a large restaurant overlooking the Temple Lake—how little foreigners know of the luxury, the marvellous delicacy, the magical refreshment of pure Chinese tea, especially when one reaches one's eleventh cup—and the conversation was its liveliest, when suddenly the general attention was turned to an appearance in the clouds, a little to the right of the Golden Mountain. We naturally asked what there was to be seen, and received the excited reply, "Look at the dragon's tail!" And sure enough, there was a very peculiar-looking strip of cloud, hanging in an inconspicuous manner above the mass of clouds that were rolling up from the South; only we must confess that to us it looked less like a dragon's tail than a rabbit. However, there was the whole neighbourhood turned out of doors and windows to behold the marvellous phenomenon. "But do you really believe that that strip of cloud is the tail of a veritable dragon?" we asked a lively gentleman from Soochow. "Indeed I do," was his unhesitating rejoinder. "So will I," we replied, "if the dragon will only show us his head too." —Shanghai Courier.

Japan.

(Gazette.)

H. M. the Mikado has declared, as his adopted son, Prince Sawa, the eldest son of Prince Arisugawa. The Choya Shinbun of this morning states that on Monday the young Prince went up to Akasaka Palace at ten o'clock in the morning, and that the announcement of the adoption was then made by His Majesty. Several presents were given to him by the Mikado and also by the Empress and Empress Dowager, and the Prince returned to his home in the Imperial carriage, attended by a cavalry guard.
Messrs. Bourne & Co. offered for sale by public auction this morning, lot No. 90 in the foreign settlement. The compound contains a large bungalow, detached office building, and a two-storied warehouse, and is in the occupation of Messrs. J. H. Huxley & Co. The highest bid made was $5,750, and this not reaching the reserve, was not accepted. We are, however, informed that a sale was subsequently concluded at $6,000. The decline of property in the settlement has been very marked of late years, but in consideration of the state of business, and the comparative uselessness of dwelling-houses in the settlement when everyone prefers to reside on the bluff, the price obtained ($6,000) is rather encouraging than otherwise to large holders of land in Yokohama.

LATEST.

We learn upon excellent authority that the court-martial passed sentence of death upon a number of the mutineers in Tokio yesterday, (August 27th), and that the sentence was immediately executed, some fifteen to twenty of the ringleaders having been at once shot. The summary nature of the proceedings of this drum-head court-martial is in strong contrast to the apathy usually displayed by the Government when its safety is menaced by revolts of a character officially declared as this Tokio affair has been, to be absolutely devoid of political significance. Military discipline may be accountable for much of what, at first glance, appears to be cruel severity towards a parcel of young soldiers, whose revolt, having no political significance whatever, must have been comparatively harmless.

The causes of the recent mutiny in Tokio are believed, by persons well qualified to form an accurate judgment, to be of much greater importance than at first supposed; and that the investigation now being made by the Government reveals a not formidably widespread.
The outbreak is now stated to have been premature, and the discovery of the disaffection among the Japanese Guards was due to an officer, loyal to the Government, observing a conversation between two of the mutineers. Dread of suppression being any demonstration could be made, and the belief of the Guards that suspicion was attracted towards them, led to the revolt of the 23rd of August, so far prematurely. Had the mutiny been of greater extent, with more concerted action it is impossible to calculate upon the consequences to the capital, which might, in the flush of lawless success, have been fired and destroyed, with dreadful sacrifice of innocent lives and valuable property.

The Belgian steamer Perusia left the dock at Yokohama to-day (Aug. 29th), and is expected in Yokohama on Saturday, to reload her cargo, and proceed on her voyage for Calcutta, via Honolulu.
This morning (August 30th) at 7.30, His Majesty the Mikado left the Palace of Akasaka on his tour to the North, escorted by his Ministers and a body of the Foreign Representatives. Their Majesties the Emperor and Empress Dowager, who accompanied His Majesty, were to take leave of him at the village of Itabashi, as were also the Ministers and Foreign Representatives.

We translate the following account of a second mutiny in the capital, from an extra of this morning's Hochi Shinbun.—
At about 10.30 last night (Aug. 30th), the force stationed within the gate of Takebashi, again rose in mutiny, and began to discharge firearms. The Central Police Department sent telegrams immediately to the police station, and a large body of police were assembled, all armed with rifles. The War department, at the same time, made similar preparations. It is not known yet to what extent the rioters belong, but they are very few in number and some of the mutineers were arrested in the street of Kojimaichi last night. Nothing reliable has yet been reported.

ATTACK ON FOREIGNERS.

A letter has been received by a gentleman in Yokohama bringing the news of the butting down of Mr. Ap Jones by masked robbers on the Shimosa sheep farm, yesterday morning (Aug. 30th). It appears that during the night, about two o'clock, three masked robbers entered the house where Mr. Jones lives, and, after gagging the servant, went into his room and attacked him with swords. Mr. A. Russell, interpreter at Yokohama Saiban-sho, who was on a visit to Mr. Jones, heard a moaning sound, and, going to the door of his room, was met by one of the robbers, armed with a sword, and Mr. Russell received a cut on the hand which he raised for the purpose of defending himself. In the meantime, one of the servants escaped and gave an alarm, at which the robbers fled. It was then found that Mr. Jones had been severely wounded with half-a-dozen swordcuts upon the head, face, and body. It is not known who were the would-be murderers, or what was the cause of their attack. The Shimosa farm is about eighteen miles from Yokohama. Dr. Schultze, who has returned from the Shimosa farm, reports that while Mr. Jones is very severely wounded, he is progressing favourably, and that he is being ably treated by Dr. Sato.

It appears, from further details of the attack, that the burglars did not escape altogether unharmed, one of them receiving a slight wound in the hand by which he was identified on the following day, and arrested.

The Hochi Shinbun, of this morning has the following:—
The police authorities in the Chiba-ken, having received news of the attack upon the foreigners, several detachments were immediately sent out to trace the assailants, two of whom were captured. On a preliminary examination by the police authorities, they confessed that they wanted to steal the money in Mr. Ap Jones' possession. They are heimin in the village of Kuno, Imba-shi. One Fujikaki and another S. Fujikaki, the former being once a Kochi in that district. Mr. Ap Jones' wounds have been found to consist of eight sword cuts on the head, right shoulder, breast, left arm and other places.

A telegram has been received announcing a severe gale at Kobe, with very threatening 'barometrical indications. The Tokio Maru, which was to leave to-day (Sept. 3rd) for this port, has been postponed in consequence.

From further particulars of the night attack upon Mr. Ap Jones and Mr. Russell at the Shimosa sheep farm on the 30th ultimo, it would appear that both those gentlemen were their lives to their presence of mind and bravery. They were sleeping in the same room, and, between one and two o'clock, Mr. Russell was awakened by a noise, and saw a man standing at the foot of the bed with a drawn sword in his hand. Another man at the other end of the bed cut through the mosquito curtain with a sword, and aimed a blow at Mr. Russell's head, which he parried with his left hand, the weapon making a gash across the palm. Mr. Russell sprang up and made a rush past his assailant, running into the adjoining room to get an old sword that was there. In trying to remove the sheath with his left hand, he felt, for the first time, that he was wounded, but, by shaking the sword with his right hand, he removed the sheath and ran back to the assistance of his host. In the meantime, the robbers made a combined assault upon Mr. Jones, who after receiving a sword cut seized the bare blade of one of the swords in his hand and wrenched it away from his assailant. While he did so the two other men cut him across the head and back. When Mr. Russell again appeared, armed with a sword, the robbers made good their escape, leaving Mr. Jones the more severely wounded of the two. Mr. Russell's wound is also a serious one, and he will be unable to return to Yokohama for a week.

Yesterday Mr. Jones was reported as being a little better. Both gentlemen were attended by Dr. Sato, who has a country-house at Sakura, at a distance of about seven miles from the farm. Two out of the three men who committed the outrage have been captured; and one of them has been recognized as the late Kochi of a neighbouring village. There were five servants in the house at the time of the burglars' visit, and these were all secured before the attack upon the Europeans.

The Hochi Shinbun says that on Sunday the United States Minister, with his secretary, left Tokyo for a visit to the farm, taking a doctor with him. Immediately after receiving the news, the Government sent Dr. F. Schultze and Dr. Sato to see Mr. Ap Jones.

MIRACULOUS CLOCK.

It is reported that the celebrated Strasbourg clock has been outdone by a Pennsylvania. In Meng's building (says the London Eagle) is now on exhibition in all probability the most wonderful clock in the world. It was built by Stephen D. Engle, a watchmaker, at Hazelton. Mr. Reid paid Engle 5000 dollars for it. Engle never saw the Strasbourg clock; in fact he has not travelled more than 200 miles from home at any time. The clock stands eleven feet high. At its base it is about four feet wide, and at the top about two. It is about three feet deep at the base, gradually less towards the top. Its colour is dark brown and gold. The Strasbourg clock is thirty feet high, yet its mechanism is not so intricate nor has it so many figures as the Hazelton clock. The Strasbourg clock's figures are about three feet high, and the American clock about nine inches. Three minutes before the hour a pipe organ inside the clock plays an anthem. It has five tunes. Bells are rung, and when the hour is struck double doors in an alcove open and a figure of Jesus appears. Double doors to the left then open and the Apostles appear slowly, one by one, in procession. As they appear and pass Jesus they turn towards him, Jesus bows, the Apostles turn again and proceed through the double doors in an alcove on the right. As Peter approaches Satan looks out of a window above and tempts him. Five times the devil appears, and when Peter passes, denying Christ, the clock flags its wings and crows. When Judas appears Satan comes down from his window and follows Judas out in the procession, and then goes back up to his place to watch Judas, appearing on both sides. As the procession has passed Judas and the three Marys disappear and the doors are closed. The scene can be repeated seven times in an hour if necessary, and the natural motion of the clock produces it four times in an hour, whereas the Strasbourg procession is made but once a day, at 12 o'clock. Below the clock is the main dial, about thirteen inches in diameter. To its right is a figure of Time with an hour-glass. Above this is a window at which appear figures representing Youth, Manhood and Old Age. To the left of the dial is a skeleton representing death. When the hour hand approaches the first quarter Time reverses his hour-glass and strikes one on a bell with his scythe, when another bell inside responds, then Childhood appears instantly. When the hour hand approaches the second quarter or half hour there are heard the strokes of two bells. Then Youth appears, and the organ plays a hymn. After this Time strikes two and reverses his hour-glass, when two bells respond inside. One minute after this a chime of bells is heard, when a folding door opens in the upper porch and one at the right of the court, when the Servant comes walking out. Then the Apostles appear in procession. The clock also tells us of the moon's changes, the tides, the seasons, days and day of the month and year, and the signs of the zodiac; and on top a soldier in armour is constantly on guard, walking back and forward. As the hour advances Manhood, Old Age and Death take part in the procession.

THE DOCTOR AND THE FARMER.

The New York World tells the following good story:—
A doctor named Royston had sued a farmer named Peter Bennett for his bill, long overdue, for attending the wife of the latter. Alexander H. Stephens was on the Bennett side, and Robert Toombs, then Senator of the United States, was for Dr. Royston. The doctor proved the number of his visits, their value according to local custom, and his own authority to do medical practice. Mr. Stephens told his client that the physician had made out his case, and as there was nothing wherewith to rebut or offset the claim, the only thing left to do was to pay it. "No," said Peter; "I hired you to speak in my case, and now speak."

Mr. Stephens told him there was nothing to say; he had looked on to see that it was made out, and it was made out. Peter was obstinate, and at last Mr. Stephens told him to make a speech himself, if he thought one could be made. "I will," said Peter Bennett, "if Bobby Toombs won't be too hard on me."
"Gentlemen of the Jury—You and I are plain farmers, and if we don't stick together these 'ere lawyers and doctors will git the advantage of us. I aint no lawyer nor doctor, and I aint no objections to them in their proper place, but they aint farmers, gentlemen of the jury. Now this man Royston was a new doctor or I went for him to come and doctor my wife's sore leg. And he came an' put some salve truck onto it, and some rags, but never done it one bit of good, gentleman of the jury. I don't believe he's no doctor, no way; there's doctors as is doctors, sure enough; but this man don't earn his money, and if you send for him, as Mrs. Sarah Atkinson did for a negro boy as was worth $1000, he just kills him and wants pay for it."

"I don't," thundered the doctor.
"Did you cure him?" asked Peter, with the slow accents of a Judge with the black cap on.

The doctor was silent, and Peter proceeded:—
"As I was sayin', gentlemen of the jury, we farmers when we sell our cotton has got to give vally for the money we ask, and doctors aint none too good to be put to the same rule. And I don't believe this Sam Royston is no doctor, nohow."

The physician again put in his oar, with, "Look at my diploma, if you think I am no doctor!"
"His diploma!" exclaimed the new-fledged orator with great contempt. "His diploma! Gentlemen, that is a big word for printed sheepskin, and it didn't make no doctor of the sheep as first wore it, nor doctor of a new man as now carries it. A good newspaper has more sense in it, I pint out to you that he aint no doctor at all."

The man of medicine was now in a fury, and screamed out, "Ask my patients if I am not a doctor!"

"I asked my wife," retorted Peter, "an' she said as how she thought you wasn't."

"Ask my other patients," said Dr. Royston.

This seemed to be the straw that broke the camel's back, for Peter replied with a look and tone of unutterable sadness:—
"That is a hard sayin', gentlemen of the jury, and one that requires me to die or to have powers as I've learn't ceased to be exercised since the Apostles. Does he expect me to bring the Angel Gabriel down to tout his horn before his time and cry aloud, 'Awake, ye dead, and tell the jury your opinion of Royston's practice?' Am I to go to the lonely churchyard and rap on the silent tomb and say to um as is at rest at rest from physic and doctor-bill, 'Gilt up here, you, and state if you die a natural death, or was hurried up some by doctor?' He says ask his patients, and gentlemen of the jury, they are all dead! Where is Mrs. Beasley's man Sam? Go ask the worms in the graveyard where he lies. Mr. Peak's woman Sarah was attended by him, and her funeral was appointed, and he had the corpse ready. Where is that likely Bill as b-longed to Mr. Mitchell? Now in glory, 'e express' his opinion on Royston's doctrine." Where is that baby girl of Harry Stephens? She are where doe our cease from trouble! and the infants are at rest.

Gentlemen of the jury, he has eat chicken enough at my house to pay for his salve, and I furnished the rags, and I don't suppose he charges for makin' of her worse, and even he don't pretend to charge for curin' of her, and I am humbly thankful that she never gave her nobble for her in-kind as he did his other patients, for somethin' made um all die mighty sudden."

Here the applause made the speaker sit down in great confusion, and, in spite of a logical retatement of the case by Senator Toombs, the doctor lost and Peter Bennett won.

CELEBRITIES AT HOME.

SIR AUGUSTIN LAYARD AT THERAPIA.
The great Elchi on whose capacious shoulders the mantle of Sir Stratford Canning has fallen is not at present at home at Pera. The splendid palace of the British Embassy near the Grande Rue is abandoned to the heat and the mosquitoes; and Sir Augustin Layard and the whole personnel of the embassy are to be found at Therapia, twelve miles up the Bosphorus. There the ever cool breezes from the Euxine maintain even in summer the temperature of spring. Therapia deserves its name; it is health itself. All the European Ambassadors have their summer villas at this part of the Bosphorus, either actually in Therapia itself or at Buzkadero, just beyond. The Bosphorus here makes an indentation on the European shore, which forms a miniature Golden Horn, and the grassy hills fall back a little in the direction of the picturesque forest of Belgrade, which is close at hand. Between the foot of the hills and the Bosphorus stands Therapia, and at the southern angle of the pretty bay stands the graceful villa of the British Ambassador.

The structure in question is two stories in height, and it is built of a peculiar kind of stone, of a light chocolate colour inclining to pink. A garden which is ablaze with flowers surrounds it on three sides; along the fourth runs a well-built quay, past which the waters of the Bosphorus flow northward, knowing no ebb. The waters in question are so crisp and clear that every pebble at the bottom can be seen from the bank; and the fish with which they abound can be seen lazily floating down with the current, or frantically shooting back again towards the Black Sea, which is their proper habitat. In the main current hundreds of porpoises deport themselves, leaping at times clean out of the water, and leaving their plump bodies so long exposed as to tempt the fishes of the Bay of Bengal. The Asiatie shore is here about two miles distant; the rolling hills of ways green. To the south east may be seen the snow-clad crest of the Bithynian Olympus; nearer at hand is the summit of the Giant's Mountain, whence the best view of the loveliest parts of two continents with their dividing waters is to be obtained any morning at sunrise. In a little haven close to the ambassadorial villa rides at anchor a beautiful yacht, bearing her Britannic Majesty's flag, for the use and pleasure of his Excellency. This yacht is in truth a gunboat minus the gun, and is manned by blue-jackets, who take a natural pride in their ship. For every day use, when running down the Bosphorus to confer, at a moment's notice, with the sorely-tried Sultan at Yildiz Kiosk, Sir Augustin Layard has close to his very doors a capacious steam launch, painted white and covered with an awning. This bright little vessel has carried more comfort and counsel to the often despairing Sultan during the last few months, while the Russians were at the gates, and more dreaded enemies in the city itself, than ever Christian craft bore to a Commander of the Faithful before.

But let us enter the picturesque chalet-like villa and see Sir Augustin Layard himself. Passing the French Embassy, which is a hundred yards nearer the village of Therapia, one proceeds along the banks of the Bosphorus till one arrives at the southern side of the little bay already mentioned. Then turning to the left into the garden of the Embassy, we see on the right the hospitable door ever open, with a tall Oriental, a cavass, magnificent in his befogged uniform of brown and black, guarding against undesirable intrusion. This superb official does not know a word of any Western tongue; but he puts himself in communication with civilised servants, who speak French or English, and in due time you are asked to walk up-stairs to the Ambassador's study. The house is French in its style and its arrangements, and also in great measure in its furniture. The floors are of marble or of parquetry. The staircases and corridors are varnished with the rarest planks, and beautiful flowers peep forth from vases almost as beautiful. At the end of a long corridor on the first floor is Sir Augustin's study. This is a large room, plainly furnished, the floor polished, the walls partly concealed by bookcases and partly by maps. Near the door is a large writing-table covered with books of reference and papers of great import, and there sits the Ambassador busy on a long despatch. He looks round as the door opens, and you see before you a man hale and vigorous, and giving in every lineament and action the impression of power, physical and intellectual. His abundant hair and large beard are gray, almost white; but somehow this does not give so much the appearance of age as of maturity. He is surrounded by nature with one of those ample foreheads for which most eminent men have to thank the kindly artists who immortalise them on canvas, and his bushy hair being flung back from its wide circumference, the result is a certain lionine expression very appropriate for a British Ambassador. He is under the medium height; but this is compensated for by broad shoulders and a well-knit frame, for which fatigue must have no terrors.

Sir Augustin Layard has not acquired, and it may be safely predicted that he never will acquire, the conventional diplomatic manner. He evidently prides himself upon his downrightness and plain-speaking. He is blunt and often brusque in his way of speaking; but not even his enemies—and he has some—have ever imputed to him the far worse fault of insincerity or double dealing, the stock imputations against ambassadors at the Porte. He is a great converser, and discourses fluently in several languages, and he knows Arabic well, and Turkish fairly; French is as familiar to him as his mother tongue. Spanish is of no account on the banks of the Bosphorus; if it were he could speak that too. He speaks his mind freely, and makes no secret of his opinions. He believes that the Turkish Government has lamentably broken down; but that there is good material in the country, which renders it foolish to despair of reform and reorganisation. He wants to hold the Empire together, and give time for the necessary reconstruction; and he does not conceal his contempt for certain projects of splitting it up into little warring 'autonomies,' which would eventually hand half the East over helpless to Russia. He is by no means open, however, about matters which he thinks it best to keep secret. His silence is at times very disconcerting when it is known that he has a good deal that he could tell if he liked. No one in Constantinople was unaware of the feelings with which his Excellency regarded the advance of the Russians upon the capital, and the diplomatic surrender of the Ottoman Power at San Stefano to which it led. But did any one know that Cyprus was to be handed over to Great Britain as a counterpoise to the Asiatic acquisitions of the Czar? No. Sir Augustin Layard's long and delicate negotiatio'ns on that and some other points were kept from the prying eyes of all the ambassadors in Constantinople and of their innumerable agents.

As regards the present situation, the mistakes of the past, and the chances of the future, Sir Augustin Layard is sufficiently communicative. If an inconvenient question is asked he omits to answer, and changes the subject. He questions his visitor with a frank determination to get for his country all available information that may be of use. He is very kindly and hospitable, and interests himself in the comfort and enjoyment of the travelling Briton who is properly commended to him. He is a great worker, and expects all the members of his large staff to follow the example he sets them in that respect. From early morning until five o'clock he is either at his desk or in counsel with the Sultan, or with the nearest Grand Vizier, or with one of the ambassadors of foreign Powers. At five he gets on horseback and rides into the Forest of Belgrade, or along the beautiful strip of shore northward to the Black Sea. Lady Layard does the honours of the house in the evening with a grace and dignity a little own. This sets Sir Augustin free, who is often called to see an ambassador or an agent from the Palace when dinner is over and night drawing on. His Excellency at home is never wholly out of harness. The continual strain and worry would wear out a less robust constitution. But the imperturbable self-reliance and unflinching will of Sir Augustin Henry Layard would go far to save him from anxieties even if his physique were of less substance and vitality. He has a strong faith in the future of the reformed Turkish Empire, and he will undoubtedly do much to give that faith the only justification which will practically avail. His energetic individuality and known sincerity have gained him the confidence of the Sultan and the Pashas, and he will use his influence with decision and boldness. He gave proof of that in getting the Porte to enter into the Convention of the 4th of June.

As the visitor quits the presence of the representative of England at the Porte, the famous sarcasm of Lady Palmerston sometimes recurs to the mind—"What a pity that the ruins of Nineveh found Layard!" But the smart saying comes back to him only because he has been led to the conviction that it was merely smart, and contained no spice of truth. Sir Augustin Layard owes less to Nineveh than Nineveh to him. His fame was not the result of an accident, but of innate qualities, which would have led him to eminence under any circumstances. Whether as an archaeologist or a diplomatist, such a man was sure to achieve distinction.—World.
